An Evening Echo.
We are contented because we are happy, and not happy because we are contented.—EDITOR.

A cent on the dollar is all the Sommers bunch promises. Read "Pledge Number One."

After the people have had their say on election day, the Sommers bunch will say "we are the people who got cleaned."

The Sommers bunch think they have made a number one pledge, but even their friends say it did them no good but a lot of harm.

"Fulfilling promises to the letter" is a Democratic newspaper these days does not go with the people. The latter have lived and learned.

The Sommers mouthpiece has broken out again with its favorite expression, "the best paying business." It is evidently thinking these days of the recent Democratic behavior at Charleston.

The Tierney platform will collapse election day. The people in the First ward already have a leg or two knocked off it and down will go the whole "massive" structure election day.

The Parkersburg State Journal is having a contest to increase its subscription. According to the sworn statement of the business manager of that newspaper there has been a decrease of forty-two in the last fourteen days. What is wrong?

In trying to give Clarkburg a black eye, the Democratic ticket seeks to shield itself by saying that strangers are saying it and not themselves. Boys, have courage enough to claim it as your own invention, and quit trying to blame strangers with "Pledge Number One."

"Pledge Number One" is still being flaunted in the face of the good citizens of Clarkburg, those who think too much of their home city to defame it, but that always is the way of the Democratic machine here and what is the use of its

trying to learn new tricks?

Because the city council saw that $2,500 could be saved the city in the matter of water works and sewerage improvements, the Democratic mouthpiece is busily engaged in denouncing what it terms a "ring" for that act. It is to be inferred from this that the Democratic ticket would save the people nothing, if it were to be elected.

The Exponent has finally summoned up courage enough to say something of the candidacy of E. J. Stout for city council. The public thought his candidacy had dropped out of sight altogether. When the Second ward votes, Mr. Stout will doubtless know that he might as well have not accepted the nomination, if really he has. One does not see his picture in the great "Magna Charta."

For some reason the Exponent clings to the idea of a political machine. It is quite familiar with the fact that is own party has one at this time that the rank and file of the Democratic party have declared war against, but it will be a cold day down South, when the Exponent is found even whimpering against it. When the Exponent's ox is gored, he bellows against the other fellow and not the one who does the goring.

The trick heretofore on the part of the opposition was to declaim what a fearful, frightful city Clarkburg was. This time the opposition does not have the courage to make such declamation. The Sommers bunch in their political advertisement ascribe a saying to "strangers within our gates." Every one is on to that sort of dodging. He manly enough to admit that you would give the city a black eye in order to satisfy your own ambition.

The Exponent wants to know whether the people are willing to continue the present state of affairs. Evidently, the Exponent is very well satisfied, judging from the high tributes it has paid various departments of the city government. Perhaps, it has been persuaded to believe that Clarkburg does not want the services longer of the best mayor Clarkburg ever had it says. Perhaps, it has grown weary of an alert chief of police such as it says Harry Brooks is.

The Exponent is busy today telling what Democratic candidates for council will do, if elected to the city council. It was just as busy last fall telling what Democrats would do, if elected to the legislature. Everyone knows how that panned out. Even the chairman of the Democratic city committee promised the night before the fall election to vote for the prohibition amendment. If elected to the legislature, but instead of doing that the Exponent says he overslept. It is a very easy manner to tell what candidates would do but an entirely different matter when it comes to doing it. The Exponent need have no worry, however, as the people will attend to the matter and it will not be by electing the Sommers ticket to office either.

Mrs. Blaine Elkins.
Mrs. Blaine Elkins goes her mother-in-law, Mrs. Hallie Elkins, one better as shown by the following comment:

There is probably no other woman in the world occupying the unique position of Mrs. S. B. Elkins. Have you ever thought of it? She is the daughter of a United States senator, was the wife of a United States senator and the mother of a United States senator. This is quite a senatorial experience for one woman and in this respect she is undoubtedly in a class by herself. We doubt if any other woman in the United States has occupied a similar position.—Kingwood Argus.

How about Mrs. Blaine Elkins, of Morgantown? Before her marriage she was Miss Mary Kenna, daughter of the late United States Senator Kenna, of Charleston. Her uncle, the Hon. William E. Chilton, of Charleston, is now a United States senator. Her husband's brother, the Hon. Davis Elkins, was a United States senator, as was her husband's father, the late Hon. S. B. Elkins, while her husband's grandfather, the Hon. Henry G. Davis, was also a United States senator. There is no doubt but that her position is the most remarkable in the United States.—Fairmont Times.

The Nation's Reserve.

It is a theory in a republican form of government that every citizen must become a soldier in time of war. In our country it is generally thought that volunteers would come forward in time of need in sufficient numbers to carry on any war. But to be of value as a soldier, the man must be trained and disciplined, and this training requires a large amount of time and the discipline of repeated practice. (After war has been declared it is too late, declares Captain Fred L. Lemmon in the March number of the National Guard Magazine.

Hence, it is necessary that drills, encampments, and other instruction be given to the citizen soldiery during times of peace. They then learn how to live properly in camp.

There is now a vast difference between the old militiaman and the present National Guardsman. Previous to the passage of the "Dick Law," the organized militia was not a national guard but a state force. The position of the National Guard at the present time is little understood by the public generally. The Dick bill was chiefly concerned with the organization of the militia to make it conform to the regular army as a condition to its sharing in the appropriations of Congress. However, the law, with its amendments, has made every soldier in the organized militia a true National Guardsman.

By the passage of the Act of May 27, 1908, the state forces became a part of the first line of defense with the regular army. When the National Guard is called out in the future, it will mean a strict realization of military duty, and the citizen soldier must be prepared to go wherever required. When the call comes he immediately goes into the national service without a new enlistment, and he must stay till the expiration of his original enlistment.

WEDDING

Ceremony is Quietly Performed Uniting a Wallace Couple.

WALLACE, Mar. 28.—A wedding took place at the home of Grant Lyon on Little Elk Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock, the contracting parties being Chester Morris, son of M. L. Morris, of near Sardis, and Miss Fairy Lyon, the oldest daughter of Grant Lyon. The marriage ceremony was performed by the Rev. L. A. McNemar, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal church here. Only a few friends witnessed the ceremony.

Cy. McIntire, William Wallace and Miss Ada Robey, who were members of the graduating class from the local school here, have gone to Salem, where they expect to enter Salem College.

The board of trustees is having a much-needed water well drilled at the Methodist Episcopal parsonage here. The work is being done by Blaine Ford.

Miss Alma McNemar, who is a student at the Wesleyan College at Buckhannon, is spending a week with her parents, the Rev. and Mrs. L. A. McNemar.

George R. Lyon, a prosperous farmer of Sycamore, was in town Monday looking after business matters. R. T. Scott, our clever watchmaker, is attending circuit court at West Union this week.

George L. Bates, a tool dresser who is working near Clarkburg, spent Saturday and Sunday with his family here.

T. F. Ashley, who has been working in the Roane county oil field, was home with his family recently.

SALEM

course is planned to meet the requirements made by the State Board of Education, including a model training school. Graduates of this department receive in full the benefits of the state law in the matter of first grade certificates. The college preparatory course is a four year course meeting in full all requirements for college and university entrance.

Many of all, however, we feel that

Salem College may with justice and pride, congratulate herself on her capable and devoted faculty.

The chair of ancient languages has been filled most efficiently by Miss Elsie B. Bond since 1890, when she received her A. B. degree from Alfred University, N. Y. Personally, Miss Bond is sympathetic, kind and much loved by her pupils, while at the same time she is thorough and painstaking as an instructor.

The department of science is in charge of Prof. Samuel B. Bond, who has served the college in this capacity for twelve years. Prof. Bond is not only a strong teacher in his line, but he possesses the happy faculty of winning his pupils to high ideals of life and study. As evidence of its esteem his alma mater conferred upon him the Master's Degree in Science in 1909.

The chair of mathematics is occupied by Prof. Moses H. Van Horn. Prof. Van Horn is a graduate of the college, having received his degree in 1896; his master's degree having been conferred two years ago. He has been a diligent student in his line. He has specialized in this department and won for himself an enviable reputation as a teacher in this branch of learning. After 8 years of successful supervision in public school work, he became connected with the college, which has since felt the influence of his gifts and power as a thorough teacher and wise disciplinarian.

Miss Nellie Saunders, who is in charge of the department of modern languages, is a graduate of Alfred University, having received her Ph. B. degree in 1908. Miss Saunders has devoted her entire energy to the upbuilding of her department. Her thorough methods, her ideals and purposes have helped in winning for her a place in the esteem and affection of her pupils.

The modern training school is under the supervision of Miss Mabel L. West, a graduate of the Whitewater (Wis.) state normal school. After three years' experience in public school service, Miss West devoted a year to special study in Columbia University in preparation for her present position. She is making the department strong and efficient.

The college has other teachers and instructors in history, physical culture and the common school branches.

A long felt want for vocal training work in the college has been filled this year by Miss Lella Stillman, a music teacher of Milton College, Wis.

Mr. S. O. Dew, the director of instrumental music, is popular with the student body and community.

Dr. C. B. Clark, the president of Salem College, is a native of the Middle West. He entered college at the age of 17 and graduated in science. For twenty years he has been an indefatigable student and teacher. He taught history for three years in Lancaster Academy, Mass. Before being called to Salem Prof. Clark occupied the chair of philosophy and education in Alfred University. He held this position seven years and left it only at the earnest solicitation of friends of Salem College.

During this time also he has won

New and Charming Hats

Strictly speaking each day is an "opening" in the Millinery department of Watts-Lamberd's, for every day brings new and original Hats, Pattern Hats from New York's leading artists. Wonderfully beautiful effects have been attained by our own designers and trimmers. New Hats come from our workroom daily.

A season of small Hats, you would say. Yet the picture Hats were never larger, statelier nor was ever variety so full, so satisfying in becoming inbetween sizes—the dainty Helmet, the Picturesque Poke, the Turban, in many sizes. Every phase of Paris art is faithfully depicted in this brilliantly comprehensive display of Hats from Paris inspired creators, and the hardly less brilliant conceptions from our own workroom.

an A. B. degree from the University of Michigan, a master degree from Alfred University, and a doctorate from Milton College, besides doing a year of post graduate work at Yale University. Though still a young man he has spent seventeen years as a most successful teacher. By reason of his wise scholarship, his teaching efficiency and his personal interest in young men and women he has won a large place in the hearts of his students, fellow teachers and acquaintances.

President Clark is an efficient organizer. His judgment is cool and his counsels wise. While he is firm in discipline he is not wanting in sympathy and helpfulness. He is always a friend to those who seek his counsel and advice. Withal, he is a dogmatist, he cherishes the highest ideals of Christian character. As a teacher he encourages self-reliance and self-activity in his pupils.

Salem's history has been a record of educational helpfulness and uplift. She is worthy of the material his studies at the Ohio Wesleyan and moral support of her friends college.

and the citizens of our great commonwealth. The young, who are seeking an education under conditions that foster the highest type of manhood and womanhood will find Salem College a place to be desired.
